Foundry College Announces Six Courses Recommended for College Credit by American Council on Education

SAN FRANCISCO — Foundry College, a new kind of college that builds future-ready skills and knowledge by providing adults with an education that combines the durable professional skills that employers seek with in-demand, job-relevant credentials to align with the jobs of today and tomorrow, today announced that the American Council on Education's Learning Evaluations Service has evaluated and recommended college credit for six of their courses.

ACE, the major coordinating body for all the nation's higher education institutions, seeks to provide leadership and a unifying voice on key higher education issues and to influence public policy through advocacy, research, and program initiatives.

"We are truly excited that Foundry College's learners will now be able to gain credit at colleges and universities across the country that accept ACE credit recommendations," said Dr. Akiba Covitz, president and CEO of Foundry College. "This opportunity is invaluable in time and money for those that want to continue further with their education. The process for being awarded these credit recommendations was quite rigorous, we gained much from undertaking it, and this award is highly coveted."

ACE Learning Evaluations helps adults gain academic credit for courses and examinations taken outside traditional degree programs by providing guidance to colleges and universities in determining the applicability of coursework and examinations to their courses and degree programs. For more than 60 years, colleges and universities have trusted ACE to provide reliable course equivalency information to facilitate their decisions to award academic credit.
